Regina Romero has over twenty years of experience in executive coaching, group facilitation, and leadership development. She has been a trusted confidante to senior leaders in the mortgage, telecommunications, healthcare, manufacturing, high tech, and pharmaceutical sectors, as well as academia, the federal government, and non-profits.

Regina is an astute advisor who has helped countless leaders think through difficult issues at multiple levels and navigate complex operational, political, and cultural challenges. Her training in psychology and grasp of group dynamics make her an ideal mentor to anyone who wants to master the interplay of people interacting in organizations.

Regina is especially skilled at helping executives work through transition issues, whether individually or systemically. She is adept at providing honest, non-judgmental, real-time feedback to executives who want to lead courageously and create an environment in which others can flourish. As a seasoned coach, Regina truly cares about others, listens with an open mind, and adds value in unexpected ways.

Regina received a Ph.D. in clinical psychology from George Washington University and a B.S. in psychology from Howard University. She is a licensed psychologist in the District of Columbia and a member of the American Psychological Association Society of Consulting Psychologists and the Executive Coaching Roundtable. She is on the faculty of the National Leadership Institute at the University of Maryland University College.
